- Over 30 Israeli army vehicles and 100 soldiers deployed in the Ein al-Duyuk al-Tahta area in the early morning and declared a closed military zone, before bulldozers started demolishing homes. Palestinian families did not have a chance to remove their furniture and belongings. Majed al-Atawneh said Israeli civil administration officers ordered him to leave his home but he refused and sat on the roof with his family. Israeli occupation army demolished homes belonging to Musbah Ali Muttur, Amar al-Fakhory, Mohammad Ali al-Haaj and Ali al-Dallam. Two of the families were forced to evacuate their homes and the other two were not at home. Israeli authorities claim that the homes were razed because they were built without proper permits in Area C, a zone encompassing 62 percent of the West Bank which is under full Israeli military and civil control. After the demolitions, Israeli soldiers fired stun grenades to stop residents from returning to the rubble. Maannews (November 15, 2011).

- Israeli Occupation authorities began resumed the construction of new concrete sections in the vicinity of the new crossing border that will replace Shu'fat military checkpoint in Jerusalem. This comes in light of preparations to complete the construction of Shu'fat crossing facilities, which will be the largest among the crossings established by the Israel around Jerusalem. The opening of the crossing will lead to the isolation of thousands of Palestinian citizens (holding Jerusalem ID cards, blue cards) living in the suburbs of Jerusalem as it will make a significant change in the movement of many Palestinian towns and neighborhoods of Jerusalem. This comes in the context of an Israeli strategic plan to reduce the number of Jerusalemites to a minimum and double the number of settlers to the largest extent within the Holy City. Palestinian towns and villages that will be negatively affected by the opening of Shu'fat crossing border: Anata, Al Salam, Shehadeh and Ras Khamis suburbs, Al Isawiya town and Shu'fat refugee camp. Al Quds (November 17, 2011).
- The Israeli occupation army raided Wadi Hilwah playground in Silwan city in Jerusalem. The playground is 800 square meters area and is threatened to be confiscated for the establishment of park a lot to a number of outposts in the area. It is worth noting that the playground is owned by Siyam Family. Al Quds (November 18, 2011).
- The Israeli occupation authorities are about to evacuate the house of Ghazi Zuhdi Zallum in Al Qurmi street in Aqbet Al Khalediyeh in the old city of Jerusalem in response to the evacuation order that has been given to the family by the Israeli reconciliation court in Jerusalem. Al Quds (November 19, 2011).
- Plan no. 11092A for the Mount Scopus Slopes National Park on 700 dunums of lands was deposited for public review, granting the public 60 days to put forward any objections. The planned park is located between the Palestinian neighborhoods of Isawiyya and A-Tur in East Jerusalem. The Israeli Minister of Environment recommended the park after consulting with settlers' leaders, in opposition to the position of the professional echelon in the Ministry. The new national park will be a bridge, creating forging a geographical link between the Old City basin and E-1." The planned park will cut between the Palestinian neighborhoods of Issawiyya and A-Tur and will prevent their potential development. There are now 60 days for the public to submit objections to the plan, after which the Regional Planning Committee will discuss the objections and will decide whether to approve the plan. After the approval the Minister of Environment will be able to declare the new National Park. Al Quds (November 19, 2011).

- Israeli settler organizations have been given the green light by the Israeli government to take over a number of central Jerusalem homes belonging to Palestinians. An eviction order for the Silwan house of the Sumarin family. on Nov. 28 is the beginning of a campaign against Palestinian properties. Sumarin house was declared absentee property and transferred by the government to the Jewish National Fund subsidiary Himnuta in 1991, lies at the entrance of the East Jerusalem neighborhood and adjacent to the controversial Israeli-built City of David tourist site. The eviction would be followed by the takeover of houses belonging to the Palestinian Zalloum family in the Old City, which has also been deliberated by Israeli courts for decades. Maannews (November 21, 2011).

Others

- The Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his forum of eight senior ministers decided to initiate a new wave of settlement construction in the West Bank, as part of a wider set of sanctions Israel decided to impose on the Palestinian Authority after it was accepted to UNESCO as a member. Netanyahu's office said that the construction of 2,300 housing units planned in East Jerusalem, Gush Etzion, and Ma'ale Adumim should be expedited (1650 units in Har Homa settlement, 44 units in Ma'ale Adumim settlement, 329 units in Ramot settlement and 277 units in Efrat Settlement). The eight senior ministers also decided to suspend the transfer of tax money which Israel has collected for the Palestinian Authority in October. The money, which amounts to more than NIS 300 million, was supposed to be transferred to the Palestinian Authority before the Eid al-Adha holiday, when the money was to be used to pay the salaries of policemen and clerks of the Palestinian Authority. Moreover, the eight ministers also decided to no longer allow UNESCO missions into Israel, and to examine the possibility of revoking the VIP status of senior Palestinian officials which allows them to pass through checkpoints. Haaretz (November 1, 2011).
- The Israeli web portal Walla reported that Israel would continue building a border wall by building another segment extending to Eilat city to prevent Africans from illegally crossing into Israel. The site added that the Israeli Ministry of Defense will request U.S. $300 million (1.8 billion EG) from the Israeli government to build a wall around the city of Eilat. Walla reported said that the wall would extend 65 miles (104 km) to the south of Israel. The Southern command of the Israeli army will build another 120 miles (192 km) in 2012. The site said it was not scheduled to build a fence around the resort city, but Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu decided after an attack last August to build a wall around the city extending from Taba, on the Egyptian border. Officials in the Israeli Ministry of Defense have requested accelerating the building process. The Israeli Ministry of Interior said 1200 Africans have crossed the border illegally. Walla (November 3, 2011).

- Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu addressed an initiative to retroactively legalize buildings built on Palestinian land in the West Bank during a Likud faction meeting. "We shall keep acting according to the law. The effort should be put into strengthening the communities, not clashing with the law." Netanyahu further added, "One cannot build on someone else's private land, there is no contradiction between reinforcing settlement and maintaining the law." Ynetnews (November 7, 2011).
- Settlers of a settlement near Jerusalem sprayed death threats on the apartment building of Peace Now activist Hagit Ofran, in what has been classified as a "Price Tag" attack. Al Quds (November 10, 2011).
- Netanyahu, Barak ask High Court for one-year delay to demolish two West Bank settlement outposts it said it would evacuate by end of the year. The state agreed to delay the impending demolitions of two unauthorized West Bank outposts built on private Palestinian property -- Givat Asaf and Amona. Both of the small hilltop communities in the Binyamin region were scheduled to be evacuated by the end of this year. Instead the state notified the High Court of Justice that July was the new demolition date for Givat Asaf and that
- Amona would come down at the end of 2012. Al Quds (November 10, 2011). The Israeli Cabinet decided to withhold Palestinian tax and customs money ($100 Million) it collects on behalf of the PNA. The Israeli Foreign Minister, Avigdor Lieberman, Finance Minister, Yuval Steinitz, defended the move and stating that the Palestinian Authority in the West Bank must be sanctioned for its UN applications, and for reconciliation with the Hamas movement in Gaza. Al Ayyam (November 14, 2011).
- The Israeli ministry of Housing and construction announced that it will market bids for 5066 pieces of lands designated for building in various areas in Israel, occupied Jerusalem and the West Bank. Among bids, 730 housing units will be available for rent at low prices, including 164 apartments in the settlement of Modi'in in the central West Bank and 130 apartments in Har Homa in East Jerusalem and 76 in the area of Kfar Saba, and 318 in Beersheba, and 42 in Rishon Lezion. The new marketing campaign includes a few pieces of land earmarked for construction in the settlements of Pisgat Ze'ev "18 pieces" and the settlement of Efrat "213 pieces" and the settlement of Har Homa "168 housing units" and the settlement of Modi'in "207 housing units".

Additionally, 991 apartments will be put for sale, including 277 in the settlement of Ariel and 192 housing units in Tira Carmeal, and 1557 housing units in the city of Jerusalem, including 743 apartments in the settlement of Ramot. Maannews (November 15, 2011).

- The Israeli Housing Minister Ariel Atias announced a tender for thousands of housing units nationwide, including some 2,000 units to be marketed by the Israeli government beyond the 1949 Green Line. The latest housing venture will see construction plans accelerated in four Jewish settlements in east Jerusalem and in three West Bank settlements – Maaleh Adumin, Efrat and Har Adar. The plans in question, which total 1,953 apartments, have already received all the required approvals, but for various reasons had not been marketed until now. However, in light of the housing minister's latest decision, control of the plans will be shifted from the government to private contractors, who will receive construction permits. Ynetnews (November 15, 2011)
- The Israeli Knesset Education and Culture Committee approved a bill that would allow museums in West Bank settlements to apply for state funding. The bill is to be brought before the Knesset for its first reading next week. Al Quds (November 25, 2011).
